

MONDALE, DEMOCRATS PUSH NAZI ECONOMICS

WASHINGTON, D.C., May 31 (IPS) — Minnesota Senator Walter Mondale has joined fellow Democrat Mike Mansfield as a leading proponent of Rockefeller's fascist economics. Mondale has proposed the creation of a National Employment Relocation Administration (NERA) which, like the Nazi Labor Front, would exert top-down control of plant closings and would submit the United States working class to mandatory "counseling," retraining and relocation.

In introducing this as the National Employment Priorities Act last December, Mondale displayed a grasp of innoculation, a key principle of psychological warfare developed by Rockefeller "theoretician" Dr. John Rawlings Rees of Britain's Tavistock Institute. Mondale concedes that for the present the bill has little chance of passage, but he wants people to start talking about relocation and get used to the idea.

Nazi Labor Front

Mondale's bill, co-sponsored by Senators Hart, Kennedy, and Schweiker, leaves nothing to the imagination. The National Employment Relocation Advisory Council is a classic fascist structure, comprised of the Secretaries of Labor and Commerce, the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, four "public members," three trade-union representatives, and three business representatives.

All plant closings would be reported to the NERA, functioning under the Secretary of Labor. The NERA could then decide whether to give the plant technical assistance such as advanced methods of speed-up, or financial assistance such as the assumption of outstanding debt. The NERA could also determine whether to help communities hit by plant closings by granting them up to 85 per cent of lost tax revenues.

Thus, with a sophisticated and constantly updated map of potential plant closings all around the country, and with extensive financial powers, the NERA could reshape the industrial and demographic map of the United States by determining which plants and communities live and which die.

As for the workers who are in the factories and towns which die, Mondale is ready to provide. His bill offers income maintenance (in addition to unemployment), continued pension and health benefits, retraining, relocation allowance, emergency mortgage and rent payments, food stamps and surplus commodities.

There is, however, a catch — the worker must agree to various "testing, counseling and placement services." And he must agree to relocation, anywhere in the country. If he refuses, or if he does not make satisfactory progress in the training or placement, he loses all income benefits. This spells a return to Nazi labor policy with a sophisticated overlay of brainwashing methods.

Direct Orders

It is no surprise that Mondale gets his marching orders directly from David and Nelson Rockefeller. Mondale was one of two U.S. Senators (the other was Charles Matthias) at the most recent gathering of the cabal in southern France in April. These strategy sessions (dubbed Bilderberger conferences by the rightwing) are largely unpublicized in the world press. While there Mondale consulted with then-German Finance Minister Helmut Schmidt, British Foreign Secretary Callaghan, several top Kissinger aides, various financial and military representatives in key European nations, and the Rockefeller brothers themselves.

Mondale's crony, Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield, kept lines of international communication going with a "personal" trip to Paris May 25 and a 30-minute meeting with Rockefeller's current chief operative in France, Valéry Giscard d'Estaing.

Breadth of Vision

The role Mondale and Mansfield and of the Democratic Party in Rockefeller's world fascist scheme is the resurrection of Roosevelt's New Deal, and its final realization through the brainwashing and relocation of millions of workers into public service work camps, such as the Wyoming Project described in IPS No. 4.

Already passed and currently pending legislation indicates the breadth of these "liberal" Democrats' vision:

- The Comprehensive Employment Training Act of 1973 is already law. Pushed by Democratic Senator Henry Jackson from Washington, the bill has established a national labor bank, which feeds into regional structures and matches unemployed workers with jobs. Should the Mondale bill become law, this apparatus would be administered by the NERA.

- Feb. 8, 1974, Republican Senator Javits proposed legislation which would provide legislation in public service jobs, a key component in any fascist "New Deal."

- These public service jobs could be provided by another bill proposed by Senator Jackson which calls for a national development corporation to conduct research and pilot projects around new forms of energy — coal gassification, oil shale technology, geothermal energy, coal liquification, etc. — all obsolete methods of energy relative to the unlimited cheap energy available through development of nuclear fusion power.

Jackson's government-industry joint corporations would provide the legislative go-ahead for the massive slave-labor projects slated for the Rocky Mountain states. The bill already has 50 co-sponsors in the Senate.

and merely requires the economic collapse to speed it through the House and the Executive.

- A yet-to-be-released Javits-McIntyre bill which will call for the creation of an Energy Development Bank, headed by a Board of Directors comprised of consumers, labor, business and government. This scheme has already been endorsed by CIA labor lieutenant, Leonard Woodcock of the United Auto Workers union.

LABOR COMMITTEE CONFERENCE PREPARES FOR "LONG WAR"

"This is a long war. A long war makes essential requirements not only for the people who want to fight it, but for the people who want to win it."

May 31 (IPS) — Fifteen hundred working-class organizers convened in New York City May 25-27 at the eighth Strategy for Socialism conference of the National Caucus of Labor Committees. The historic task is clear: the International Caucus of Labor Committees must mobilize the international working class to win the battle against Rockefeller in the next six months or humanity will descend into Rockefeller's pit of mental and physical mass genocide.

In the cadre school during the week preceding the conference itself, leaders gained the international strategical, tactical, and analytic tools which give them the potential to make correct tactical decisions in the field.

At the conference itself, there was only one question on the agenda. "How can we — a tiny handful of some 1500 human beings — who have assumed personal responsibility for the survival of the human race — how can we ensure that we will meet the essential requirements to win this war?"

The process of answering this question is the essence of the organizing process itself — this battle waged in the mind of every Labor Committee member.

In the next six months, this battle will rage in the minds of hundreds of thousands of workers across the continent.

To answer this question — a fight had to be won at this conference.

Our Strategic Situation

Costas Axios, a member of the National Executive Committee, opened the conference with a strategic overview of the international battlefield — locating the Labor Committees as the only self-conscious force in history which knows how to act in the crisis facing humanity. Tracing the development of the Rockefeller plot for fascist military takeover out of the wreckage of Detente, he disqualified the Soviet Union as a force to be

The purpose of this legislation is both psychological warfare, as Mondale concedes, and serious preparation for the coming economic crash. While Federal Reserve Chairman Arthur Burns warns that current inflation will wrench the country from its political and economic foundations, Rockefeller and his Democrats are preparing the new fascist political and economic foundations to replace constitutional democracy.

depended upon to act in the self interest of the international working class.

The Labor Committees are in a Stalingrad battle for the human race. "Within the next 2 to 2½ years at most — we know that we can create the massive international forces to take state power. But to do this we must survive the next immediate months ahead...."

The key to winning that battle is Germany. "Before Rockefeller moves on Britain or Italy he must clear up the situation in Germany lest he scare the SPD into an alliance with the Soviet Union. He must destroy the German Social Democracy. Under the illegitimate leadership of Helmut "Judas" Schmidt, the SPD was preparing to sabotage its own election in Lower Saxony — the prelude to the destruction of the SPD machine.

"Our tiny forces in Europe, upon the resignation of Brandt, rushed to save the SPD from Rockefeller's ruin by mobilizing the entire German working class to support the SPD in the Saxony elections. We, the only group who had anything to say to the German working class about Brandt's resignation, who could explain why it occurred, and what needed to be done — are urging workers to vote for the SPD nonetheless not on the basis of Rockefeller's program for fascism but on the basis of a working-class program for a European Golden Snake backed by increased trade with the Soviet Union and the brute force development of fusion power.

Axios outlined the tactic for the period: get out the press. New Solidarity provides the worker with an intelligence link to the international working-class struggle and thus lays the basis for an immediate transformation to a mass fighting organization when the call for action goes out.

Axios' speech in outlining the world-historical juncture of the Labor Committees provided the conference with a Reality Principle — a standpoint in the real world from which each member could gauge his or her reactions to the discussion.

The Heart of the Battle

"To win a war, you must have troops with the necessary morale. Especially in a long war, the morale factor becomes of the deepest importance. We must address that problem directly."
