

TRIST IN TROUBLE

Nov. 3 (IPS)--A week ago, IPS exposed the work of leading Tavistock brainwasher Dr. Eric Trist in establishing self-policing work gangs as part of an experimental productivity study at the Rushton Mine in Rushton, Pennsylvania.

Trist had also been working on a project at a larger mine, the Federal No. 2 of the Eastern Coal and Gas Company in Morgantown, Pennsylvania. Though the project had the full support of United Mineworkers (UMW) president Arnold Miller, Trist evidently ran into some unforeseen complications. According to a report from Trist's nominal employers, the National Quality of Work Center, "because of conditions beyond the control of the project team, the local [emphasis theirs] union at Eastern, through a series of misconceptions, voted not to continue with the project."

And though Miller and the UMW national leadership stand committed to "reinvigorate" the project, Trist's "friends" are running into some difficulty. According to the report, "various difficulties complicate the union's current commitment to recommencement of the project...."

Last week, Eric Trist's 14-year-old daughter shed some light on what might be causing the bottleneck. In a phone conversation with IPS, the young Trist said that her daddy's work in the mines was "going fine." However, "if another miner is killed by the project, they may wind up suspending the whole thing," she said sadly.

AGENTS PROMOTE "NEW WORLD ORDER" FOR ROCKEFELLER

Nov. 3, (IPS)--Spurred on by the temporary demoralization of the leaderless, European working class, an assortment of international operatives for the Rockefeller family have publicly called for a "new world order" this past week. The pattern includes editorial statements and interviews by Zbigniew Brzezinski and Claude Boissonnat of the Trilateral Commission; Jean Denizet, a writer for Boissonnat's L'Expansion; Claude Gruson, advisor to the "Planning Council" of the French government; and finally, Giorgio Amendola, notorious CIA-infiltrator in the leadership of the Italian Communist Party.

Ironically, a secret Brzezinski-led conference of Rockefeller agents in Bellagio, Italy, only two weeks ago issued directives for European heads of state to dupe the Soviets, through anti-U.S. speculation into believing that they represent a Europe "independent" of Rockefeller policy. Exposing their Bellagio line simply as psychological warfare against the USSR, this spate of "new world order" proposals all converge on the global fascism being zealously pursued by the Rockefeller brothers.

BREZINSKI: THE "OCCUPATION" MODEL

In an interview with the Brazilian newspaper Veja, CIA policy-maker Brzezinski speaks of Western democracy as "already a quarter century old and in need of a profound renovation." What is wanted is "a new type of international system," he says. Proposing "new institutions" to control energy, food, and population, Brzezinski envisions "a return to that highly creative period of American foreign policy that goes from 1945-49" -- when U.S. occupation forces under Chase Manhattan's John McCloy set up the looting of Europe using the brutal weapon of food control on the battered working class.

"Look," Brzezinski summarizes, "we need to change the international system for a global system, in which new active and creative forces -- recently developed -- should be integrated." He emphasizes that obvious Rockefeller satrapies "such as Brazil and Iran... will have a decisive role in the new international order."

"Within the U.S., two conditions must be fulfilled before the "new world order" becomes reality. According to Brzezinski, these are a swing-back of power to the Executive Branch and -- a takeover of the Executive Branch by Nelson Rockefeller. "The reality of our times is that a modern society... needs a central coordinating and renovating organ which cannot be made up of 600 people.... I believe that Rockefeller, as Vice-President will actively participate in foreign policy... in at least three areas. First, Latin American problems... Second, monetary problems. and third, in the consideration of the global problems I mentioned before."

The "global problems" referred to included "commercial, monetary mutual security relations involving the IMF, NATO, etc., food, world population, and the energy question."

"This could change our foreign policy," Brzezinski adds wryly.

ILLIBERAL MARSHALL PLAN

Brzezinski's frankness is equalled by Claude Gruson, President of the Inter-Ministerial Environment Group and an "advisor" to French President Valery Giscard D'Estaing through his newly-created "Planning Council." Gruson was quoted in the October 30 Le Figaro, calling out right for "the creation of a supranational authority.... It would perhaps be a new Marshall plan, but without the liberalism of yesterday" (Emphasis added).

More concrete in its proposal is the October issue of the French magazine L'Expansion which, under the editorship of active Trilateral Commission member, Jean Boissonnat, has become the most notorious Rockefeller mouthpiece in France. An article by Jean Denizet, written at Boissonnat's direction, calls for a "new world order to solve the depression-crisis wracking the capitalist system. "Never has a crisis been worse than now," writes Denizet. "Everyone is trapped in hard-core deflation.... every country is becoming unworthy of credit."

Having emphasized the deadly form into which David Rockefeller's sudden and calculated credit restrictions have molded the crisis, Denizet delivers the punchline: "Now, the time for independent national moves is over. Everything would be destroyed. The only solution is to promote a new Bretton-Woods international order. This means the creation of an international organization with enormous powers to intervene and regulate the deflationary process. The organization should be able to implement every kind of international and national measure in every country" (Emphasis added).

NAZI MEDICINE

In the same connection, editor Boissonnat editorializes on the relevance of Hitler and Mussolini's corporativist methods, praising "the addition of socialist mechanisms to capitalism" -- "national socialism" on an international scale. "In case the right fails," writes Boissonnat, "capitalism should entrust its adversaries with political power in order to make them give the medicine which will save it."

Boissonnat is referring to the "historical compromise" policy -- of parliamentary suicide the Chilean Way -- being peddled in the international Communist movement by CIA agent Giorgio Amendola.

Not accidentally, Amendola, an operative in the Politburo of the Italian Communist Party (PCI) chose this same week to launch a campaign with the objective of liquidating the European Communist movement in favor of Rockefeller's "new world order." Both Amendola and his close conspirator in the PCI Gian Carlo Pajetta have worked over the past few months to forge an international anti-Kremlin faction to annul the left turn launched in July/August by the Suslov-Bonomarev leadership of the USSR. Amendola's faction also has been trying to eradicate the programmatic decision for internationally coordinated class confrontations taken at last January's Brussels Conference of European Communist Parties. The Brussels line, now almost a year old, has not been implemented as a direct result of sabotage by the CIA-controlled faction under Amendola's leadership.

Amendola echoed Zbigniew Brzezinski in a public speech in Milan October 26, going so far as to declare that, in effect, the Brussels program does not exist, the Communist Parties are without program for the present crisis, and that the only program worth following is that of Altiero Spinelli!

Spinelli is a Rockefeller lap dog on the multinationals-control Common Market Commission.

PCI'S AMENDOLA: ROCKEFELLER "WORLD REORGANIZATION"

The same week that Trilateral Commission agents across the globe call for a "new world order" under the Rockefeller family, CIA-"Communist" Amendola's Milan speech includes the statement: "The crisis is a world crisis, but we won't die from it....The problem cannot be solved country by country, but with the EEC taking
