Italy: Andreotti Out To Destroy 'Clockwork Orange' Apparatus

by Vivian Freyre

The new Italian government under arch anti-Atlanticist Premier Giulio Andreotti has initiated a major factional battle against the Rockefeller social control networks spanning military intelligence and the Atlanticist-riddled Justice Department. This represents a follow-through and amplification of the European Labor Party (ELP) tactic of identifying and initiating court action against the most exposed layer of Atlanticist controllers in the person of Francesco Alberoni, the Clockwork Orange "academician" who personally directed the creation of terrorist gangs.

Andreotti's speech to Parliament of Wednesday outlining his government's programmatic and policy stance was a bombshell from a number of standpoints, not the least of which was his re-statement of commitment to revamp Italy's Justice Department and smoke out the top political controllers of Italy's right and left-wing terrorist cancer. Indicating that he intended to go beyond mere pretty speeches, Andreotti announced that by October 15 he would introduce into Parliament a bill to revamp the State Secrets Act in order to divest the high-level terrorist controllers of their major legal cover from investigation.

Not coincidentally, the very next day after Andreotti's announcement of war against the Rockefeller terror networks and the revision of the State Secrets Act the press was filled with streams of self-apologia from the leaders of the targetted networks.

Alberoni on Thursday authored a three-column spread in the Atlanticist-controlled Corriere della Sera in a pathetic attempt to clear himself from ELP charges of his role in the brainwashing of youth into terrorist zombies. Reaching levels of unmistakable disassociation, Alberoni argues that in the present "ebb" phase of society only depoliticization can save individuals from going literally "insane." The wound-up sociologist proceeded with a lengthy eulogy of Zen Buddhism and other "mystic" pseudophilosophies, adding weight to rumors that Alberoni is hightailing it to a monastery to withdraw from public exposure. "And for this I am being personally attacked by a paranoid group," Alberoni whines.

Alberoni has become such a hot political potato since the ELP filed its court suit against him, that there is every indication he is indeed being canned by his former benefactors at the Institute for Policy Studies-linked Agnelli Foundation. The Milan court where the ELP suit was filed has already begun investigations under judge Alessandrini into Alberoni's stint at Trento University during which time he personally oversaw the brainwashing of the youths later to emerge as the infamous Red Brigades. The Agnelli Foundation is vehemently denying any current connections to Alberoni, demanding that the Foundation be kept out of the investigations. Inside the Italian Socialist Party (PSI), to which Alberoni nominally belongs, a campaign is underway to boot out Alberoni and his Clockwork Orange sociologist buddies.

Franco Ferrarotti, one such colleague inside the PSI, was forced to follow up Alberoni's piece in Corriere della Sera with an extensive apologia for the field of sociology itself, arguing impotently that even Prime Minister Andreotti supports sociology because once a few years ago Andreotti's magazine Concretezza spoke well of a Ferrarotti speech.

Also on Thursday, the day after Andreotti's Parliament speech, former Prime Minister Aldo Moro of the outgoing government issued an open letter to the press denying that he had misused the State Secrets Act to cover up fascist (Atlanticist) networks inside military intelligence (SID). Moro answered public charges, made against him by the editor of the daily Paese Sera, that Moro had been protecting SID fascists in the so-called Jannuzzi case. Investigative journalist Lino Jannuzzi in the early 1960s had documented evidence proving the existence of a "parallel SID" operating in collusion with fascist terrorist gangs. When the case came up for trial, Moro — then Premier — confiscated the evidence and deleted all major portions of the documentation under the cover of the State Secrets Act.

With Andreotti's repeal of the Act slated for mid-October, Moro, one of the top Atlanticist political controllers at the governmental level, is running scared. Jannuzzi has been called in as an expert witness in a related case against the Rockefeller-Agnelli wing of military intelligence initiated by Judge Vitalone who is generally known to be an Andreotti spokesman. Jannuzzi, editor of the weekly Tempo Illustrato and a key member of the anti-Atlanticist wing of the PSI, has authored and published attacks against the PSO countergang "sociologists" of the Alberoni and Ferrarotti stamp.
