

Cecil Rhodes was a Rothschild protégé. A Rothschild employee, Lord Milner, aided by a titled Rothschild, Lord Roseberry, took the lead in a drastic reorganization of British policy and British intelligence at the turn of the present century. All the Rothschilds, together with the British monarchy, and the Cecils, Churchills, Russells, and so forth, joined in a common determination to subvert and conquer the United States in one way or another, to end once and for all the dirigist republicanism that made the United States great.

There were other notable British families—the Chamberlains, for example. The Chamberlains, at one point prime funders of the Fabian Society, contributed to British intelligence the Houston Chamberlain who, toward the close of his life, approved Adolf Hitler's grooming as head of the Nazi Party, and encouraged his collaborator, Karl Haushofer, who later wrote Hitler's Mein Kampf (with the aid of Haushofer aide, Rudolf Hess). The family also contributed Hitler admirer Neville Chamberlain, the man who carried the umbrella to Munich in 1938—and almost ruined the umbrella business forever, for reason of the disgust which soon ensued.

In the course of things, as Lord Milner reorganized British intelligence coordination around the newly created Round Table organization, and established, with Fabian leader Webb, the geopolitical policy (which caused two world wars) as British policy to the present date, Bertrand Russell intersected the Fabian Society and became a pacifist.

Russell abandoned that profession of pacifism (publicly) only during one interval, the late 1940s, when he campaigned for a preventive nuclear war against the Soviet Union. Once the Soviets had developed an operational H-bomb first, Bertie dropped the "preventive nuclear war" proposal and launched his "ban the bomb" movement.

Russell's World War I pacifism has direct bearing on his later role in developing the foundations for the environmentalist and terrorist gangs of the 1970s.

Pacifism was never a matter of conviction with Russell, nor with most of the pacifist promoters. It was a special sort of cover for intelligence operations. Once the usefulness of this cover was recognized, the British Friends Service Committee was developed, together with the American Friends Service Committee. Each of the religious-pacifist groups was explored for similar possibilities. The creation of entities such as the American Friends Service Committee not only established more numerous intelligence covers, but gave better credibility to the nonreligious pacifist entities, and also provided opportunities to dupe unwitting members of the Society of Friends and other religious groups into helping defray the operating costs of British intelligence.

Notable is the case of Karl Korsch, a close Russell associate in the 1930s in the USA — in such projects as developing the subversive linguistics program which Noam Chomsky represents today.

Karl Korsch, early a political operative for a German industrial firm (Zeiss), was awarded a two-year training program in England by the Fabian Society prior to World War I. He returned a Fabian operative and a pacifist. As a pacifist he was commissioned in German military intelligence throughout the war. At the close of the war, Korsch set up a famous, most effective intelligence operation for the British in Weimar Germany, successfully penetrating the Communist Party of Germany, while also playing a crucial role in creating the so-called Frankfurt School. Korsch's operations, under which Sidney Hook received his intelligence training in Europe, were notable in their penetration of the Soviet Union, linking up to former Parvus sub-agents G. Riazanov and N. Bukharin. (Bukharin at the time was an agent of Royal Dutch Shell-Samuel family intelligence operations—while within the Soviet leadership.) Sidney Hook had a collateral role in these doings, together with war-time pacifist Eduard Bernstein (also recruited to the British intelligence service by the Fabian Society) and others. The "right

This is the initiation oath currently in use by the 4th Grade of the Knights of Columbus of Mexico, which through its close ties to the Jesuits and the Order of St. John of Jerusalem has obviously maintained its undiluted lineage back to the original Apollonian-Dionysian cults. opposition" of the Communist International (Bukharinites, Brandler, Lovestone, et al.) was a British intelligence operation which Korsch intersected at that time.

After launching the "Third Camp" movement, Korsch dropped out of politics, and began working on the development of linguistics with figures such as Carnap. After reaching the United States, Korsch worked closely with Dr. Kurt Lewin, of MIT and later Ann Arbor. He also worked with Bertrand Russell, Carnap and others, in introducing linguistics to the University of Pennsylvania and other locations.

Noam Chomsky today is not only a Korschite in respect of linguistics, but is an ultra-left Korschite in politics, and in maintaining the intelligence-operative traditions of Korsch. The "Trotskyist" "Fourth International" of Ernest Mandel et al. is also closely interfaced with the old Korschite British intelligence circles in Germany, and with allied intelligence circles in France and Belgium. Mandel's German career, intersecting at one point the sponsorship of former British intelligence operative Richard Loewenthal and close collaboration with Peter Graf von Oertzen, is also heavily interlocked with those

During World War I, pacifism was the principal cover for important intelligence transmission between England and Germany, connecting through safe-house arrangements in Scandinavia.

To comprehend this one must note British geopolitical policy in two world wars to date and in British projections for World War III. The target of British strategic objectives is the so-called "Eurasian heartland" — i.e., either the conquest or destruction of Russia. Britain rigged World War I, from 1866, with the primary intention that Germany should go eastward (only) to break up Russia to the glory and profit of the City of London. The Wittelsbachs (Bavaria), virtual British puppets, and key Anglophile elements of the German Imperial Court would have accepted that gladly, but republican-industrial impulses intersecting the German Army demanded also a march westward—against England, not necessarily France—according to the anti-British strategy of the Schlieffen Plan.

British intelligence shopped Anglo-Dutch superagent Parvus to the German General Staff, with the German government paying Parvus upwards of thirty million marks during the war for Parvus's consultations and Parvus's Scandinavia-centered operations against Russia. The "Parvus Plan" for whose manuscript-form the German government advanced a down-payment of one million marks, was nothing but the geopolitical plan of Milner, Mackinder—and Bavarian General Haushofer.

Parvus's special qualifications were several. He had played a key role for British intelligence in the 1905 Russian Revolution with the aid of talented dupe L.D. Trotsky, had performed to British satisfaction in the Balkan operations, and had a number of "left" figures on his string, including his subagents Karl Radek, G. Riazanov, and N. Bukharin. It happened that the same Lenin whom Parvus shipped east — with three million marks tucked into Radek's purse, its source unknown to Lenin — outwitted all the intelligence services who had rigged the February Revolution and thought they had the sequelae under control. The British were decidedly not pleased, and what displeased Britain displeased Colonel House, whose prize puppet was Woodrow Wilson.

The intelligence operations between Britain and Germany during World War I, including the pacifist courtesy channels and joint British-German operations along the Scandinavian "Northern Route" into Russia, were not quite of the sort one would ordinarily imagine between two adversary powers.

The parallel to pacifist covers for intelligence operations is, most notably, the International Red Cross. The International Red Cross was a British-controlled operation of the Hospitaller Knights of St.
