

Political assassinations: How they're pulled off

Why Kissinger gloated over Kennedy's assassination

by Lyndon H. LaRouche, Jr. Contributing Editor

President John F. Kennedy was "a security risk," Henry Kissinger once said in answer to a question soliciting his reaction to Kennedy's murder. In fact, there is much documentation of Henry Kissinger's gloating over the 1963 assassination. I am opposed absolutely to everything the Kennedy machine represents, but justice obliges me to give President John F. Kennedy his due. If a President of the United States can be assassinated and that assassination covered up Warren Commission-style, is there any ordinary citizen of this nation who can expect justice? In addition, President Kennedy had a few good points, which no honest opponent of the Kennedy machine will ignore.

The Kissinger connection

During recent years, according to my personal knowledge, Kissinger has been involved in a number of murders, as well as trying to sabotage my security in 1977 and more recently advertising my imminent assassination to blue-ribbon groups in Western Europe. Whether he was personally involved in the 1963 assassination of Kennedy, I do not know. I know that he was extremely pleased by that assassination.

After Kissinger was picked out of the mud by Fritz Kraemer, Kraemer aided Kissinger in receiving training under Harvard University's Professor William Yandell Elliott. Elliott was a British secret-intelligence agent from the 1920s, and was the immediate subordinate of John Wheeler-Bennet of British Secret Intelligence Service. Through Elliott, Kissinger was integrated into the psychological-warfare, or Sussex division of the British Secret Intelligence Service during the middle 1950s.

After being assimilated into the British Secret Intelligence Service, Kissinger was assigned to George Franklin of the New York Council on Foreign Relations—according to Franklin's recent statement on the matter.

The New York Council on Foreign Relations is a daughter-entity of the British SIS think-tank, the London Royal Institute of International Affairs. Kissinger was then boosted to nationwide prominence in the U.S.A. through a book ghost written for Kissinger by the late Gordon Dean. With that background, Kissinger was posted by British intelligence to McGeorge Bundy's staff, under President Kennedy, in the National Security Council. Later, after two incidents, President Kennedy ordered Bundy to fire "that lunatic." Therefore, many analysts attributed Kissinger's gloating over Kennedy's assassination to "sour grapes."

Who killed Kennedy?

I do not know the names of the highly trained professional assassins who assassinated President Kennedy. However, everyone in the intelligence business knows that the Bronfman-linked Permindex organization was the most prominent group engaged in preparing the assassination. It was French intelligence's tracing of funding of attempted assassinations of de Gaulle to the United States which brought to public light the facts behind the Louisiana grand jury indictments.

There is no mystery concerning the motive for the assassination of Kennedy. Former British Prime Minister Harold MacMillan has documented his motivation for eliminating Kennedy in his published memoirs. If one knows that the Permindex organization is an "asset" of the British-Canadian Special Operations Executive crowd, the connection between MacMillan and Kissinger's motives and the actual killing is conclusively demonstrated. The only mystery remaining, so far as my knowledge is concerned, is the names of the actual professional assassins used at Dealey Plaza. Only people totally ignorant of the facts believe the Warren Commission hoax, or the Oswald "lone assassin" fraud today. The assassination was prepared by Kissinger's superiors in British SIS.

There are two highlights of that administration which I believe deserve honor to the present day. In my best estimation, John was a playboy-careerist overall. Yet, somehow, the significance of the office of President broke through that playboy outer shell and activated a better potential within him.

The first of the two achievements of the Kennedy administration is John's rallying the American people behind the NASA project set into motion by the Eisenhower administration. At that time, John was probably approaching this as a political publicity-stunt. I think he was following advice to appear to act like F.D.R. would have acted. Whatever John's motives at the time, he did a good thing in that instance. He saved our nation, for an extended period, from the collapse of R & D which has occurred under the Carter administration.

The second, more noble accomplishment I believe represented a genuine, internal improvement in John's quality. That was the way he reacted to the experience of the 1962 Cuban Missile Crisis. During 1963, John showed increasingly a perception that one must not play games with the security of the United States. MacMillan's memoirs give us an accurate insight into the British motives for Kennedy's assassination.

Ted Kennedy is an entirely different kettle of fish. Perhaps the fearful experience of the assassination of two brothers has something to do with his present condition. I am open to evidence on the personal side of Ted's present condition. Nonetheless, it is a fact that Ted is a miserable flake and that the machine he represents is pure evil.

The threat to LaRouche

Perhaps I am open-minded about the 1963 John Kennedy because I am presently targeted for assassination by the same gang which prepared his assassination. In general, the motives for my assassination are closely related to the motives MacMillan gives for Kennedy's assassination.

Archduke Otto von Hapsburg has declared that "LaRouche will soon disappear." Henry Kissinger has made similar hints at an early assassination before blue-ribbon semisecret audiences in France. Friends of Alexander Haig have recently blamed me for eliminating Haig's candidacy for the presidency, and I am also blamed for hurting Zbigniew Brzezinski badly with my half-hour NBC-TV nationwide broadcast. President Carter, it is reported, is in a fit of uncontrollable rage because of my attacks on his administration in nationwide TV broadcasts on two successive Sundays.

Carter et al. know that I am targeted for assassination by the Muslim Brotherhood, including the assassination teams of the Khomeini dictatorship currently deployed under "Islamic Guerrilla Army" cover in the United States. Carter knows that elements of organized crime tied to international drug interests have also targeted me publicly for assassination.

Carter is working to eliminate my security, to aid those various assassination-efforts to succeed. Naturally my old personal enemy Henry Kissinger is complicit in the operation.

How George Wallace was knocked out of the race

by Paul Goldstein

On May 15, 1972, candidate for the Democratic Party presidential nomination, Governor George Corely Wallace, was shot four times at point-blank range at a shopping center in Laurel, Maryland where he had been campaigning. The assassin was Arthur Bremer.

Wallace, who professed his racist populist demagogery with the same conviction that any independent southern conservative Democrat would use to get votes from an alienated blue-collar population, had built an independent political machine nationwide, a machine not under the control of the "fixers" centered around the New York Council on Foreign Relations.

Wallace's was, in the eyes of the CFR, a dangerous combination.

A classic modus operandi was employed in the assassination operation. A press-coordinated slander and vilification campaign built a climate around Wallace to make credible the allegation that a "lone" assassin carried out his assignment for his own personal political reasons. For months prior to the hit on Wallace, every major media outlet—newspapers, television and radio—linked the name "Wallace" to pure evil, a "racist anti-Semitic, vile and ruthless man who is unyielding to any of his opponents."

This is just the first of several steps that are routinely taken by the organization of paid assassins known as Permindex. Wallace's close advisors warned him several times to avoid certain crowds and to wear protective armor, a warning he did not heed.

Finally, Arthur Bremer was deployed out of Canada into the United States, trained by Permindex.

Ironically, Bremer's original target was not Wallace, but President Richard Nixon himself. Not able to penetrate the President's security, Bremer turned away from Nixon and moved onto the Wallace campaign trail. "Wallace's security seemed lax and he loves to shake hands. With Wallace dead, who would care ... to stop Wallace is to stop the Klan ... Wallace will be dead," said Bremer's diary.

On May 15, Gov. Wallace finished his speech, jumped down from the bullet-proof podium and headed straight for the crowd. Three Secret Service agents were assigned to protect him. They didn't notice as Bremer slipped through the security screen easily and fired his charter arms .38 special right into the chest and stomach of Wallace.

How they're preparing to assassinate LaRouche

by Vin Berg

1980 Democratic presidential candidate Lyndon Hermyle LaRouche, Jr. is otherwise the chief executive of a private international political-intelligence news service. Among his internationally recognized special qualifications, the candidate is a leading specialist in antiterrorist counterintelligence. It was under his direction that a special report on methods of combating international terrorism was written at the request of leading figures of Italy's Christian Democratic Party and with cooperation of persons closely associated with the late Pope Paul VI.

The approach recommended by LaRouche has since been employed with significant success by elements of the Italian government and antiterrorist special task forces of the Carabinieri. LaRouche's role has been the subject of leading coverage in Italy's major news media, and LaRouche has been fictionalized as the "Colonel Harris" in a book of which prepublication excerpts have been published in the Italian press.

LaRouche's work on behalf of establishing a new, gold-based monetary system, plus his work against international terrorism and the illegal drug traffic have caused him to be the target for terrorist assassinations in the past. Notable is an August 1977 Baader-Meinhof/George Jackson Brigade targeting of the candidate, in which instance Henry Kissinger intervened personally in an effort to prevent LaRouche from receiving assistance from Western Europe and other security agencies.

The four crucial elements of a terrorist assassination deployment are now in place against targeted victim LaRouche.

The four elements are as follows:

1 The orchestration of massive libeling of the selected victim in major as well as "far left" and "far right" news media. Campaigning in New Hampshire, LaRouche has been the target of four separate slanderous pieces in the Keene Sentinel. He has been repeatedly termed "kook," "Communist," "fascist," "anti-Semite," "Nazi" or similarly labeled on radio talk-shows in both Boston and New Hampshire, in a TV magazine, in the University of New Hampshire student newspaper, and in the Washington Post. Editors and moderators have sometimes freely referenced CBS-TV reporters and New York Times-linked reporters as their source.

2 The construction of a vast network of slander-mongering, using the same "Nazi," "anti-Semite," "communist," etc. lies against the candidate. The slander-mongering relies on both rumor-mill and telephone-bank methods. Thus, a George Bush-Republican organizer was found aboard a senior-citizens bus, returning from a LaRouche campaign rally, spreading the rumor that the candidate was a "communist." Pat Russell of the Democratic National Committee in New Hampshire told people that LaRouche is "a Nazi." State congressman D'Amours answered an inquiry by calling LaRouche a "neo-fascist," and his aid referred persons to another individual who "knows more about his anti-semitism."

3 An attempt to isolate the targeted victim politically by various modes of corruption and intimidation of his supporters. A political figure in Dover, N.H. who supports LaRouche had his tires slashed and a bullet fired through his windshield. The Washington Post reporter, Megan Rosenfeld, systematically called every name on a list of LaRouche contributors, to ask only one question: "How do you feel about LaRouche infiltrating the Democratic Party?" The New Hampshire Right to Life Committee passed a resolution that the LaRouche campaign was incompatible with Right to Life membership, and the office of Sen. Humphrey then contacted Right to Life supporters urging them to quit the LaRouche campaign on the basis of the resolution.

4 A coordinated effort to strip the targeted victim of security. This has involved direct witting action by the White House, by Democratic National Committee members, by New Hampshire Gov. Hugh Gallen, and the national and state news media. Gov. Gallen told Mrs. Helga LaRouche, "I'm working against your husband. You should fire your security." A state trooper a short while later detained her security guard and ran a computer check on his handgun permit. Carter state field coordinator Richard Patenaude said, "We're going to shoot him ... (ha, ha) ... I wish CBS's '60 Minutes' show would do something on him. ... I've been in touch with the Keene Police on their not giving security protection to LaRouche." Manchester school board member Katherine Gabriel stated that she didn't want LaRouche's security guard to appear with him at the local high school, and was quoted in the Manchester Union Leader under the headline: "LaRouche welcome, not guards' guns." Gabriel said she had been in touch with the Boston Anti-Defamation League and state Democratic chairman Romeo Dorval.
