

Mexico.

Humberto Rice García, the PAN candidate who lost recent elections in Mazatlán and who is now heading up the “alternate city government” which the PAN has installed in the Sinaloa port city with so much fanfare, is a member of one of the nastiest Hitler cult formations to arrive on the Mexican scene in the past two years, Integral Human Development, Inc. (DHIAC). DHIAC’s hard core includes the controllers of Nazi paramilitary gangs, the GUIA and the TECOS, based in Puebla and Mexico City.

The PAN federal congresswomen from Chihuahua, Per-eza Ortuño, is directing preparations for the first national congress of the Women’s Civil Organization (Organización Civil Feminina), the women’s auxiliary of DHIAC.

Though the public side of the Nazi-communist alliance has only surfaced in the past two months, the two forces have collaborated for several years.

The PAN is consciously representing the tradition of the bloody rebellion of backward peasants organized by Jesuit priests against the Mexican state in the late 1920s, the Cristero Wars. In 1980, the PSUM joined the PAN in demanding that the clergy, banned by the Mexican constitution from participating in politics, be given rights not only to make political statements but to run for political office. It was a political bombshell—but perhaps not that surprising, given the fact that the “red” bishop of Cuernavaca, Sergio Méndez Arceo, had started out his career as a Cristero in the 1930s.

The two parties similarly share a “greenie” hatred of advanced technology and industry. In April, 1981, when East German anti-technology and peace movement guru Rudolf Bahro visited Mexico, he was jointly hosted by the terrorist-ecologist PRT party and prominent factions of the PAN. The PAN’s leading ideologue and former party president, José Angel Conchello, attended the Fourth World Futurists Conference in Washington, 1982, and sang the praises of E. Schumacher (“Small Is Beautiful”) as his greatest model next to Milton Friedman. It was Conchello who, in the mid-1970s, began to popularize the “successful economic policies” of Hitler’s Finance Minister, Hjalmar Schacht, as the correct road for Mexico.

Perhaps most serious from a security standpoint is that these areas of ideological convergence map onto “on the ground” alliances of terrorist-linked forces on the U.S.-Mexico border. The paradigm is the “left” terrorist squatters movement called the Committee for Popular Defense (CDP) in Ciudad Juárez, across the river from El Paso, Texas. The CDP, which maintains active liaison with both the FALN and the Revolutionary Communist Party in the United States, was instrumental in the election of the first PAN mayor of Ciudad Juárez in July, 1983. The PAN, for its part, has in the past turned out its members to join the funeral procession of a terrorist deployed jointly by the CDP and the Communist 23rd of September League, responsible for repeated acts of violence against U.S. diplomatic personnel in the early 1970s.

French press pursues Genoud connection

by Thierry Lalevée

Following the Dec. 31 terrorist bombings in Southern France and Tripoli, Lebanon French press outlets, for the fifth time in a week, have exposed the connections between the terrorist network of “Carlos,” the Swiss-based Nazi International banker François Genoud, and the Soviet and East German intelligence services who are directing the Carlos-Genoud terrorism against French and other targets from East Berlin. In the Le Figaro of Jan. 4, counter-terrorist specialist J. C. Reix denounced the “Genoud networks” as behind Action Directe terrorists Bruno Breguet and Baader-Meinhof member Magdalena Kaupp, both associated with Carlos. The French exposés have been followed by a similar exposé from an unlikely source, West Germany’s Stern magazine, whose editor, Henri Nannen, was part of Josef Goebbels’s Nazi propaganda operation.

If the Soviets are directing terrorism against the French from bases in East and West Berlin (Carlos is proven to have moved back and forth freely), exposés of this fact begin to make things extremely uncomfortable for such “neutralist” politicians as West Germany’s Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher and French Foreign Minister Claude Cheysson. The exposés, based on material originally developed by EIR, amount to a concerted political counterattack against those in Europe who intend to decouple from the United States in favor of a deal with Moscow. For example, Cheysson was scheduled to go to East Berlin this month to inaugurate a French cultural center. How can he do so when East Germany has been shown responsible for terrorism in France? France’s only cultural center in West Berlin was blown up by Carlos last August, killing two persons. Investigations by the French DST and DGSE have now ascertained:

1) The international terrorist group associated with Ilich Ramírez Sánchez, a.k.a. Carlos, was responsible for the Dec. 31 operations. As revealed in Le Figaro and other French media, French counterterrorist agencies know that a week before the bombings an eight-man team travelling with Pakistani, Tunisian, Turkish, and Greek passports entered France, then reached Marseilles on Dec. 31 (see EIR, Jan. 17).

2) The entire operation was guided by remote control under the personal control of Carlos from his base in West Berlin. Carlos only left West Berlin on Jan. 3 to reach East Berlin, where French intelligence, report the French media, has been able to locate him precisely. Upon confirmation of Carlos's presence in West Berlin Jan. 3, French teams moved in—too late.

As investigations revealed, Carlos resides often in West Berlin; his primary residence is East Berlin, where, according to the Jan. 7 issue of the French daily Le Matin, he lives under the personal protection of East Germany's intelligence chief, Gen. Markus "Misha" Wolff.

It appears, however, that he is also under the protection of West Germany's Hans-Dietrich Genscher, whose foreign ministry surely knows of his movements into West Berlin. A new aspect of this came to light when Agence France Presse reported Jan. 10 that the West German government is about to postpone the trial of Baader-Meinhof terrorist Gabrielle Tiedemann, presently in Swiss jails awaiting extradition to West Germany, because Carlos has threatened terrorist action against the trial. Other reports are that Genscher's office "forgot" to send Swiss authorities the extradition request on time.

More is involved than postponing a trial: this is a major backdown to Carlos and Soviet-backed terrorism, and an invitation for them to proceed with their terrorist wave. Genscher is endangering the security of NATO allies and U.S. personnel on European soil.

According to Le Figaro of Jan. 9, Carlos maintains close ties with the new generation of the Baader-Meinhof gang, the "Revolutionary Cells." RC members are reported by Le Figaro to have helped Carlos in the operation in Marseilles. The RC are part of the terrorist clandestine branches of the peace movement; they announced Jan. 5 in a 28-page report released by the pro-terrorist West German daily Tageszeitung that they would now lead the "peace movement" toward more radical directions, including terrorist actions against the United States. The RC are suspected of being behind eight thefts of U.S. army trucks in the recent past, trucks authorities fear could be used for Beirut-style kamikaze attacks.

On Jan. 10, Le Monde ran a lengthy exposé of François Genoud as the friend of Carlos and the financier behind Nazi Klaus Barbie's war-crimes trial lawyer Jacques Verges. The Jan. 5 issue of Stern magazine ran a four-page article exposing for the first time in West Germany the relationship between SS officer Klaus Barbie, Verges, and Genoud.

Genoud is reportedly frantic over the public linkage of his name with Carlos; indeed, according to French sources, the entire Swiss establishment is up in arms—after all, that establishment is linked to the Nazi International Genoud runs, and has some very deep political deals with Moscow. Exposés of Genoud may be only the first signal of operations aimed at unveiling the Fourth Reich character of Switzerland.

The Swiss government has let it be known that it will wholly back Genoud. Swiss magistrates handling Genoud's complaints against several journalists have received orders to "teach the French a lesson."

Soviets and CFR pressure Mitterrand

by Joëlle Leconte

French President François Mitterrand announced in mid-December, during a state visit to Yugoslavia, that he would soon issue an "original proposal" to resume the United States' arms-control negotiations with the Soviet Union. To this he added some words of praise for the U.S.S.R.'s participation in the victory over Nazism, and emphasized that "European harmony progresses through the French-Soviet dialogue."

What kind of initiative will the French government make? Reading the Soviet government daily Izvestiya of Dec. 30, one discovers that during the Soviet-French talks at the Moscow foreign ministry on Dec. 28-29, the January Stockholm session of the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe and disarmament was discussed—"in particular preventing the arms race in space."

The hostility of President Mitterrand and especially of the foreign ministry to a beam-weapons defense is not new. During his United Nations speech last September, Mitterrand emphasized the need for disarmament talks and said that he might accept an accord among the five nuclear powers which would limit modernization of the French strategic nuclear forces, if it would involve an agreement on three points, among them the establishment of a treaty banning any arms race in space.

Clearly, Mitterrand still does not understand the strategic importance of President Reagan's new doctrine, which would open an era of Mutually Assured Survival (MAS), offering true disarmament for the first time by making nuclear missiles obsolete.

The Elysée has been put under strong Soviet pressure as there are at least three elements of Mitterrand's defense policy the Soviets would like to wipe out: 1) his relatively strong commitment to the Atlantic Alliance (such as his support for the deployment of the Euromissiles in West Germany, and his general opposition to decoupling Europe from the alliance with the United States); 2) the program of modernization of the French strategic nuclear forces (the number of submarine-launched warheads is planned to rise from 98 to 500), and 3) the French potential to carry out the production and deployment of the neutron bomb.

For the past year, the U.S.S.R. has not only launched a propaganda effort against the French neutron bomb, but has threatened to include the French and British strategic forces
