On Nov. 2, Kesha received 62,011 votes, or 30% of those cast, in a heavily Republican district, which had been represented in Congress for years by the disgraced former Republican House Majority Leader Tom DeLay.

In the course of the campaign, Kesha put enormous pressure on her opponent, Republican incumbent, Pete Olson, to stop defending Obama, and organize his party to join her and the LaRouche Democrats, to remove Obama. Although Olson did not make a commitment to do so, he did congratulate Kesha, following the election, and stated that he agrees with her that Obama is destroying the nation.

Kesha Rogers: ‘It Ain’t Over Yet!’

Nov. 3—Kesha Rogers issued the following post-election statement today.

First of all, I would like to thank all of those across the nation and across the world who supported my campaign in this historic fight. But, as the saying goes, “It ain’t over yet!” There will be developments in the following days, that no one could have predicted. The growing anger at this insane President is becoming more and more immense.

There is nothing about this election that is decisive, except that we are in the worst economic breakdown crisis the world has ever seen, and the American people are demanding leadership and solutions. That is what my campaign has provided and will continue to provide. We are about to be hit by a hyperinflationary explosion, and there is little time left to act to save the country. The Democratic Party can follow my lead and that of Lyndon LaRouche, and turn the country around. The Democratic leadership now in place will remain there until January, and a lot can and must happen. We must make this interim session a sane-duck, not a lame-duck session.

As Kesha noted in her post-Nov. 2 statement, nothing was decided in the election, except that the American people are demanding leadership and solutions to the worst crisis in history. She and Lyndon LaRouche are ready to provide that leadership.

As I have stated, clear decisive leadership: That’s our only chance. The solutions I have laid out during the campaign, for the “LaRouche Plan” for a real economic recovery, must be implemented. The 25th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution still stands as our only chance of ridding the nation of an insane President. Before the new Congress convenes, the existing Congress can move in the immediate period to reinstate FDR’s Glass-Steagall law. We must then move to implement NAWAPA, to rebuild the nation, employing millions in productive jobs. And the team of leaders in our scientific and engineering communities stands ready to do that. The devastation to our aerospace community must be reversed. We must fully fund our manned space program and prepare the way for a true mission in extraterrestrial developments and Mars colonization.

We have a great responsibility before us, and although I am no longer a candidate for office, I will continue to intervene and provide leadership through the LaRouche PAC. I hope that you will continue to fight alongside us, to raise the scientific and cultural standard of the population.
