From the Managing Editor

You all know the story about Willie Sutton, the famous bank robber of the 1930s and '40s, who, when asked why he robbed banks, said, "Because that's where the money is." Now, it seems that Sutton's "template" is being applied to the British imperial financiers' wholesale robbery of depositors money in the banks of Cyprus, and soon, at a bank near you—because that's where the money is. Either by directly taxing deposits, as in Cyprus and Spain, or through expansive money-printing, creating runaway inflation, as in the U.S. and Japan, your money is now being expropriated to rescue the utterly bankrupt international financial system, even if only for a few more weeks or months. "A monstrous crime is occurring before our very eyes," writes Helga Zepp-LaRouche in our cover story this week, "Glass-Steagall: Alternative to Murderous Looting."

In a video interview with LaRouchePAC on "The Cyprus Template: 'Bail-In' vs. Glass-Steagall," EIR's Paul Gallagher discusses the 1930s precedent for this monstrous crime: how Ferdinand Pecora skewered the "banksters," and paved the way for FDR's Glass-Steagall Act.

In National, we review the counter-motion to the growing insanity of the Obama/British "template," as seen in the U.S. drive to reinstate Glass-Steagall, which is now on the agenda in 13 states: "Glass-Steagall Momentum Puts Pressure on Congress To Act." The mass-murderous intent of Obama's killer austerity policy is exposed in "Obama's Sequester Cuts Medicare Chemo; Cancer Clinics Appeal to Congress."

In International, "Closer to War in Korea and Iran: Who Will Stop Obama?" updates the war danger in those two hot-spots.

Lyndon LaRouche contributes this week's Feature: "Or, Call It 'End-Game': Crux!," in which he highlights the war-avoidance commitment of such earlier outstanding U.S. leaders as Kennedy and MacArthur, against the British Empire's permanent war strategy; this is supplemented by an in-depth examination of MacArthur's brilliant victory at Inchon.

An Open Letter to Congress from LaRouchePAC spokesmen on the immediate need for planetary defense, is followed by Benjamin Deniston's speech on "Managing the Inner Solar System," to the March 23 Schiller Institute conference, in Science.
