From the Editors

Fast-paced dramatic developments, from Argentina to Iraq, to London and Ukraine, can produce a dizzying, even terrifying, effect, if not looked at from a top-down, long-term strategic approach. Lyndon LaRouche has specialized in that approach for decades, and it was his method which was applied in the recent Schiller Institute 30th anniversary conference in New York, which comprises our feature in this issue (Conference).

Former Senatorial candidate Kesha Rogers keynoted the afternoon panel of that conference, with a call to restore the real American tradition, which restoration requires dumping Obama and Wall Street. We provide transcripts of all the presentations which followed, both in person and by video. All together, they represent a strong goad to action to save the Republic. The additional speeches from the first panel, which touched crucial subjects such as uncovering the Saudi role in 9/11, and the police-state measures of the FBI and NSA, are included. We conclude with Helga Zepp-LaRouche's moving address on the need for Classical culture to achieve the task.

Our coverage of breaking developments is equally important. First, the Argentine debt crisis, and what's at stake, is analyzed by Ibero-American editor Dennis Small, applying LaRouche's approach to what is a bail-in move that could sink the financial system (Economics). Second, we present the view of Russian Presidential Advisor Sergei Glazyev on the global crisis, in an article he wrote entitled "On Eurofascism"—a viewpoint no one interested in surviving the current crisis should ignore (Current History).

Then, there is the stunning development in London, of the launching of impeachment proceedings against Tony Blair—a move that has everything to do with the imminent fate of that other royal puppet, Barack Obama, who is facing increasing resistance to his drive toward thermonuclear war here at home (International).

Finally, we turn to Southwest Asia, where the Blair-Cheney instigated Iraq crisis is raging. Our Danish correspondent Tom Gillesberg sends us an in-depth interview with the Iranian ambassador to that nation, which provides useful insight into ongoing developments. And we present Part II of our series on the Saudi role in this horror, a role taken in tandem with the British Pest herself.

EIR will take its annual July 4 Independence Day skip next week. Watch www.larouchepub.com for crucial developments until our next issue, which will be dated July 11.
